

CIFA publishes the 2024 Sustainability Report: concrete results and a long-term vision

Senago (MI), September 18, 2025 – CIFA announces the publication of the 2024 Sustainability Report, a document that transparently illustrates the results achieved and the initiatives undertaken to contribute to the transition towards a safer, more innovative, and environmentally conscious construction sector.

The journey is guided by a Sustainability Strategic Plan built on three operational pillars:

- Green & Circular Mindset: reducing environmental impacts through the recovery of production waste, improving energy efficiency, and extending the lifecycle of products.
- People Empowerment: enhancing human capital with training programs, development paths, and initiatives dedicated to the health and safety of employees.
- Ecosystem Approach: promoting sustainable practices throughout the value chain, actively engaging suppliers, customers, and local communities.

CEO Statement

Davide Cipolla, CEO of CIFA, states:

“For us, sustainability is not just a goal but a concrete way of operating. It means innovating with low-impact technologies, ensuring people’s safety and well-being, and generating lasting value for the territories where we work. We want to be active players in transforming the construction sector, guided by responsibility, transparency, and innovation.”

A solid architecture: the “building of sustainability”

The Report presents our strategy through the metaphor of the “building of sustainability”: a framework resting on the principles of health and safety and durability, supporting clear objectives and projects that translate into measurable and long-lasting actions.
